When Civility Breaks Down: Designing Interest-based Approaches to Chronic Conflicts

Noon Lunch

1PM to 5:30 PM Pre-conference

5 CLEs Pending

In all conflicts, there is a better outcome than winning and losing, a more successful process than accusing and blaming, and a deeper relationship than exercising power over and against others. As divorce mediators, we understand better outcomes are achieved when adversaries participate in meaningful dialogue to jointly solve common problems.

Globally, we are mired in political conflicts filled with incivility, bitterness, personal attacks and divisive language that diminish our ability to work together and negatively infiltrate all types of relationships. Politically and relationally, we need to design new ways of discussing our differences that lead to learning, empathy and collaboration.

In this session we will discuss how to think about political and relational conflicts, the neurophysiology, morality and ethics of political and relational conflicts, and how to create heartfelt, emotional communication and design interest-based conflict-resolution systems in our mediation practices.

Kenneth Cloke JD, PhD, LLM

- World-recognized mediator, dialogue facilitator, conflict resolution systems designer, teacher, public speaker, author of numerous books and articles.
- Founder of the Center for Dispute Resolution in Santa Monica, CA, where he has been a mediator, arbitrator, facilitator, coach, consultant and trainer.
- Specializes in communication, collaborative negotiation, dialogue facilitation, and resolving complex multi-party disputes, including thousands of marital, divorce and family disputes.
- Co-founder of Mediators Beyond Borders, which mobilizes mediators around the world to support individuals, organizations, communities, and governments in building conflict-resolution literacy and capacity in under-served communities.
- Taught and mediated in: Armenia, Australia, Austria, Bahamas, Brazil, Canada, China, Cuba, Denmark, England, Georgia, Greece, India, Ireland, Japan, Mexico, Netherlands, New Zealand, Nicaragua, Pakistan, Puerto Rico, Scotland, Slovenia, Thailand, Turkey, Ukraine, USSR and Zimbabwe.

Designing Questions that Reveal Hidden Dynamics & Release People from Conflict

Questioning is an art and science that conflict-resolution professionals at all levels continually hone in order to advance their techniques to the highest levels. By asking deeper questions in strategic ways, mediators ultimately reveal the secret to a couple's problem that transforms it, makes it resolvable and suggests new paths forward. Participants will take a fresh look at forms of persuasion and advocacy while learning to design questions that reveal the hidden substructures and emotional logic in a variety of conflicts and settings.

Anatomy of Divorce: How Mediators and Courts Collaborate

We are welcoming a panel to share with us the anatomy of a divorce and how the court and mediators can collaborate to help participants create better and more sustainable agreements. The panel will explore the following: What happens when a divorce mediation breaks down and a couple goes to court? What happens to our agreements when the parties no longer agree with what was decided in mediation and they choose not to return to mediation? How can we improve the agreements to avoid the pitfalls that bring the agreement to court? What support exists for mediation in the court system now and what is the future of mediation in the courts? Judge Matthew Cooper will share his thinking and insights on his recent decision on shared parenting, which was the 2018 Case of the Year in NYSCDM's Annual Update on the Law.

Alternative Ways of Dealing with Conflict & Trauma

1.5 Mental Health* CEs Pending

* Mental Health CEs Co-sponsored by R. Cassidy

According to the CDCP, 1 in 4 girls and 1 in 6 boys experience sexual abuse. Such trauma is considered an antecedent to crime, drug and alcohol abuse, incarceration, school dropout, teen pregnancy and suicide attempts. Hidden Water is a restorative justice program designed to interrupt this cycle, starting where abuse happens most often – in the family. Our model is based on the indigenous practice of Peacemaking Circles, and founded on the belief that abuse harms all members of a family, not just the person directly impacted. This session will explain this alternative process and its impact.

College Planning 101 for Divorced Families

Families of divorce face greater challenges when deciding how to pay for college. This session will help mediators better understand how to guide families by addressing:

- Which parent files the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)?
- How should the CSS/Financial Aid Profile be filled out?
- Which tax year is counted and what tax forms are required?
- What is Expected Family Contribution (EFC) and how is it calculated?
- How is child support & alimony counted on the financial aid forms?
- How do IRS rules differ from FAFSA rules?
- How does being separated affect the filing?

Power Balancing in Divorce Mediation: Things are not always as they seem!

1.5 CLEs and 1.5 Mental Health* CEs Pending

* Mental Health CEs Co-sponsored by R. Cassidy

Every training in divorce mediation and all standards of practice emphasize that power balancing is a required task of the mediator. Yet, little is known about the topic except that every one of us is impacted by the application of power dynamics in ALL relationships. This workshop will look more closely at power and how it impacts the mediation process. But YOU will bring your experience on power dynamics and discuss it with our panel of experts in an “open mic” format. You will find the person sitting next to you a great resource.

Magistrates Share Insights on Child Support and Shared Custody 2 CLEs Pending

This presentation will focus on the issue of child support agreements when parents share equal time or almost equal time with the children. The child support magistrates will discuss the different options couples might use to calculate child support in a shared parenting arrangement. The magistrates will give the court's perspective and discuss how mediation decisions might face challenges. In those cases, the judges will discuss what mediators can do to protect their clients.

Critical Incidents in Mediation: Saving the Process

2 Mental Health* CEs Pending

* Mental Health CEs Co-sponsored by R. Cassidy

Let's expand our collective wisdom on best practices when dealing with bad behavior in the mediation room and avoid using Duct tape and Tasers. This facilitated discussion is a different type of workshop where peers will review specific situations, share ideas and learn from each other. We will think through effective responses to challenging situations including: entitled attitudes, sexism, testing mediator neutrality, affairs, imputed income, etc. Attendees will learn to:

- Recognize and deal with their own personal triggers
- Avoid being judgmental when clients are challenging them
- Understand how to best respond and fine-tune skills when the going gets rough.

Better Together Apart: The Five Pillars of an Elegant Divorce 2 CLEs Pending

By offering tools to support clients in self care, we can elevate their consciousness, open their portals to compassion and teach them to listen with the same passion with which they want to be heard. By consciously cultivating patience, respect, clarity, peace and forgiveness, mediators will be able to help clients better regulate their responses to disputes during the divorce process. This approach will eventually save couples significant time and money. By encouraging them to reset and recalibrate, we can help them to create a positive future beyond divorce. This session also will address self-care strategies and techniques for mediators.

From QDRO to COAP and RBCO: Decoding the World of Federal Pensions 2 CLEs Pending

The Federal lexicon of retirement is daunting by itself - what are FERS, COAPs, TSP, Tier 2 RRB, and at least a half-dozen different retirement systems? The largest Federal government plan is the Federal Employees Retirement System (FERS) with over 3,000,000 members, while the older CSRS program now has only 200,000 members (but they are the older group closest to retirement). Dividing these plans as part of the property division upon divorce is similar to state government plans and many corporate/union plans but there are differences. This workshop will start with the essentials and build up to the nuanced differences that can be critical.

What Every Mediator Needs to Know About Parental Alienation: Psychological and Legal Perspectives 2 CLEs & 2 Mental Health* CEs Pending * Mental Health CEs Co-sponsored by R. Cassidy

This workshop will help mediators better understand what parental alienation (PA) is and how it affects family members. Linda Gunsberg will present the psychological perspective and discuss treatment interventions for families entrenched in this phenomenon. She will discuss the role of the forensic expert in determining if PA exists, how it impacts on a particular family, and remedies for the Court to consider. Jordan Trager will discuss the legal perspective and how PA is treated in the New York courts, legal remedies available to alienated parents, as well as an overview of New York case law. Mediators will be able to use this information to develop effective mediation strategies for these clients.

Lessons Learned from Divorce Mediations Involving Law Enforcement Officers: Strategies for All Challenging Personalities

This session is a how-to on dealing with the moral and mental characteristics of members of law enforcement, in particular, how many personality traits correlate to certain positions within the department. Simply stated - choose any characteristic in a client - overbearing, meek, compulsive, paranoid, lazy, over aggressive or narcissistic. From that, you will learn how to:

- tell what position a party most likely holds in law enforcement
- identify them early in the mediation process
- work around challenging traits and complete the mediation successfully.
